- * White poppy seeds (Khus Khus) - 2 tbsp
- * Fennel seeds, coarsely ground - 2 tbsp
- * Suva (Dill) powder - 2 tbsp
- * Fenugreek (Methi) powder - 1 tbsp
- * Cardamom powder - 1 tsp
- * Batisa (Batisu) powder - 30 g
- * Saffron - A generous pinch, soaked in 2-3 tbsp warm milk

METHOD

1. Heat the ghee in a heavy-bottomed pan.
2. Fry the gond until it puffs up. Remove, cool, and crush coarsely.
3. In the same ghee, roast the wheat flour on low heat for 18-20 minutes until golden brown and aromatic.
4. Add the almonds, cashews, and desiccated coconut. Roast for another 2-3 minutes.
5. Switch off the flame and allow the mixture to cool slightly (it should remain warm but not very hot).
6. Add the grated jaggery and mix until it melts completely into the warm mixture.
7. Add the crushed gond, white poppy seeds, fennel, Suva (dill) powder, fenugreek powder, cardamom powder, Batisa powder, and saffron-infused milk. Mix thoroughly until everything is evenly combined.
8. While the mixture is still warm, grease your palms lightly with ghee and shape into 40-50 g ladoos.
9. If the mixture feels dry, add 1-2 tablespoons of warm ghee. If it feels too soft, let it cool for 5-10 minutes before rolling.

Storage

- * Store in an airtight container.
- * Keeps well for 3-4 weeks at room temperature in a cool, dry place.
- * Refrigerate if the weather is very humid.

Suggested Intake

- * Enjoy 1 ladoo daily, preferably in the morning with warm milk.
- * Traditionally consumed during the first 6-12 weeks postpartum, depending on individual digestion and recovery.
